A PATRON says of the result of the organization in his neighborhood: "The cussion of questions of practical interest to Patrons, which form a feature of our grange, is having a tendency to develop not only a better manner of expressing ourselves, but a greater willinguess to make the effort. ounty; gate-keeper, M. B. Waugh, of Montgomery county. THE Grangers are doing more to protect and establish substantial enterprises in connection with their organizations than all the efforts of legislation and capital have done heretofore. At Red Oak, Iowa, they propose the organization of a stock company for establishing a linseed oil mill, to consume

the large amount of flax seed raised in that vicinity. We hear many instances of this kind every day, and hope that the good work may go on with re-donbled energo.—Omaha Union. The narrow-gange railroad from Salinas to Monterey, in California, is about completed. This is literally a grangers' railroad. The project was first broached, discussed and organized in the grange. It has been done by making war upon the grain rings of San Francisco. Before the grange year 1873, the difference between the price per bushel between San Francisco and Liverpool was about 89 cents. In 1873 it was only sixty-six cents per bushel, thus giving e farmers twenty-three cents more. The saving on the 445,000 tons shipped at San Francisco would be nearly $3,-500,000, besides that shipped from Vallejo. All this is owing to the concert and co-operation of the farmers. Then satistrange flonring mill, at Fari-Jinn., is one of the most com-

THERE are very many things in which Patrons can co-operate beside snpplying the family with groceries or shipping their grain. Matters suggest themselves now which at first thought seem chimerical, but which can, by proper thought and agitation, and by the proper persons taking hold of them, become practical. A community perfectly united and organized, may perform with cheapness and ease what an individual would find only 54,712 girls to 101,072 boys. impossible. The day may come when united granges on the co-operative prin- small boy of the present day is the un hand, to use the surplus.

If the western Grangers are not becoming potent in a political way, they certainly exhibit a wonderful activity collectively, in pushing the individual interests of the farmers. This is especially true in Iowa, where the hay-seed elements have carried the grange system into more branches of every day nceds than in any other state. Tho order has attained immense strength in the state.
